Portfolio Commentary

Global bond markets as measured by the Citigroup WGBI was down 3.36% over the quarter in anticipation that the Fed would be raising rates for the second time this year. The ECB also indicated that it plans to wind down stimulus measures by end December but will maintain low interest rates for at least the next year.

Locally the bond market declined by 3.9% with investors exiting EM markets on the back of a rampant dollar, higher US rates and concerns around the impact that a trade war between the US and China would have on emerging markets. The longer end of the SA yield curve came under pressure with the 12+ duration (-4.9%) bonds weakening significantly. The STEFI cash composite returned 1.78% over the quarter while the Rand closed at 13.71 to the US Dollar weakening by 13.6% from its Q3 close of 12.38.
