Quarterly Commentary

The developed equity market sold off some 4% in September giving up all gains earned in July and August. This ended seven consecutive months of gains from the developed market index. While coming in flat at -0.01%, the Developed market fared substantially better than the overall Emerging market which detracted -8.1% over the quarter amid significant Chinese headwinds and inflation concerns.

The September chaos can largely be attributed to the more hawkish turn of central banks, deepening inflation concerns, sluggish economic recovery and tightening Chinese regulation.

Severe cash flow concerns at China's second largest property developer, Evergrande, triggered global liquidity concerns and questions surrounding the health of the Chinese economy.

China's decision to further curb their gaming sector added to investor uncertainty, especially after the dire ramifications of their EdTech regulation changes.
