Quarterly Commentary

After a weak November, global developed equity markets bounced back strongly in December to finish the quarter up 7.8% and the year 21.8% both in dollar terms. The weaker global emerging market sentiment detracted from the overall emerging market performance, resulting in a negative 1.3% and negative 2.5% return over the quarter and year respectively.

Chinese stocks were among the worst performing stocks globally for 2021 amid additional Chinese regulations on foreign listings and concerning reports of potential US sanction on Chinese companies.

The Russia/Ukraine situation further incited geopolitical tension and added to the risk off emerging market sentiment.
